

From: Donnell Sam
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 11/17/01 4:03am
Subject: Comments from Australia on the Microsoft case

I think it is funny that the DoJ lets a company which has preyed on others left, right and centre get away with less than a slap on the wrist.

Is the DoJ technically ignorant? Have you ever tried using any other browser along with Internet Explorer on Windows?

Has anyone from the DoJ tried playing Real Audio clips on XP?

Are all the technical writers fools? Are they all biased? How can a company with such a horrendous record be allowed to continue to produce software which reduces the chances of anybody else competing?

Why must people be condemned to use mediocre software just because Microsoft produces it?

Sam

--

Sam Varghese
<http://www.gnubies.com>

It is extremely dangerous to put a match-box in the hands of a monkey. - old Indian proverb